When Saying 'I Do' Meant Giving Up Your U.S. Citizenship Meg Hacker

Did you know that from 1907 to 1922 American women lost their American citizenship by marrying non-Americans without even leaving the United States?

Did these women regain their citizenship? Not necessarily!

Naturalization...

...is the process in which a person becomes a U.S. citizen.

Tips:

- Not everyone who immigrates becomes a citizen - it is a choice, not a requirement...
- Not everyone who loses their citizenship knew they had lost it.
- Not everyone who loses their citizenship, gets it back.

Check out Ancestry, Fold3, and FamilySearch for digitized naturalization records

Marriage before 1907

- If the marriage to a foreigner occurred prior to 1907, the Supreme Court ruled that “a change of citizenship cannot be arbitrarily imposed, that is, imposed without the citizen’s knowledge or concurrence.
- The American woman who married an alien before 1907 and continued to reside in the United States did not because of her marriage cease to be an American citizen.

Act of 1907

- Act of March 2, 1907 said “Any American woman who marries a foreigner shall take the nationality of her husband”
- Her legal identity was submerged in that of her husband's.

Act of 1922

The Cable Act

- Act of September 22, 1922 repealed the 1907 Act and prohibited expatriation of a U.S. citizen by any marriage contracted after that date to an alien eligible for citizenship.
- Women in America now have equal nationality and citizenship rights with men.
- Named for Congressman John L. Cable from Ohio

Foreign men, married to American women, who became U.S citizens, did so, but without changing the status of their wives.

Certificate of Naturalization, No. 1890607, issued on the 13th day of April, A. D. 1925

“A presumptive loss of her American citizenship.”

- If an American woman marries an alien and lives abroad for 2 years in the country of her husband or for 5 continuous years outside of the U.S., she is subjected to “a presumptive loss of her American citizenship.”
- This is contrary to the 1922 Act that an American woman would not lose her citizenship and was described as “one of the greatest discriminations against an American woman....”

Another issue....

- A woman who lost her citizenship due to marriage because of the 1907 Act and living abroad, could return to the U.S. to regain her citizenship...

however, at the same time....

- The 1924 Immigration Quota Law was established...and she would have to return to the U.S. as a quota immigrant.
- If the quota for her husband's country had been exhausted that year, she could not get a visa and therefore could not return to the U.S. to repatriate.

H.R. 16975--March 3, 1931

Now a woman remains an American unless...

- She formally renounces her citizenship by a personal appearance before a U.S. court
- She becomes naturalized under the laws of another country
- She has taken the oath of allegiance to a foreign government, or
- She married an alien ineligible for American citizenship prior to March 3, 1931.

“Our law for the first time now completely recognizes the dignity of an American woman’s citizenship and permits her to feel that her allegiance to our government is as fine, intimate and sincere as a man’s.”

Act of 1936

If a woman lost her citizenship by marriage between 1907 and 1922 and the marriage had since terminated through death or divorce....

Then she could file an application and resume citizenship by simply taking an Oath of Allegiance

After the 1936 Act—

...only widowed or divorced women could repatriate.

All others still had to go through the whole naturalization process.
